YOUTSEY IS GUILTY.

Insanity Proceedings to be Instituted

In a Motion For Suspension of Judgment, Which Was Passed
Until February Term.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 20, 1900.— Twelve men, all of them of intelligence and good repute, decided this morning at 9:12 o'clock that Henry E. Youtsey, formerly stenographer and private secretary to former Auditor Samuel H. Stone, was guilty of the murder of Gov. Wm.
Goebel and fixed his punishment at imprisonment for life.

The court room was well filled with people when the verdict was rendered, but none of the prisoner's relatives was present except his father, bent by years and acute rheumatism, who sat near the head of the prisoner's bed which had been drawn close to the door leading into the petit jury room.

When the Clerk, in loud tones, announced the finding of the jury the old man buried his face in his hands and wept bitterly. The prisoner lay perfectly still. Not one of his muscles moved and there was no change in the expression of his face.

The bed was pulled back, the door closed, the jury filed out and the celebrated trial was at an end.
The third man tried for the assassination of Gov. Goebel had been convicted.

MOTION FOR ARREST OF JUDGMENT.
The attorneys for the condemned man made a motion to arrest the judgment, on the ground that the offense charged was not under the form of law. They then made another motion, praying that judgment be suspended until inquiry could be made as to the defendant's sanity. Both motions were passed by the court for hearing on February 2, the second day of the next term of the Scott County Circuit Court.

SAERIFF TO DECIDE ABOUT PRISO-NER'S REMOVAL.

On the motion of both the court and the Commonwealth's Attorney, an order was entered, commanding the Sheriff to remove the prisoner to the Frankfort jail for safe-keeping. On account of the condition of Youtsey the court left the time of his removal to the direction of the Sheriff and the attending physicians.

SAD FATE.

Father Shot His Own Son in The Philippines.

Father Now Suffering From Remorse And a Wanderer on the Face of the Earth.

Columbus, Oct. 16.—Maj. Charles N. Rockefeller shot his own son in the Philippines, and now is a wanderer on the face of the earth, suffering from remorse.

Maj. Rockefeller, with his young wife, was stationed at Hong Kong in 1872. A child was born, a boy, and they named him Robert.

In 1872 Maj. Rockefeller arranged to sail for San Francisco, and two days before the date set the Chinese nurse disappeared with the boy. No trace of the boy could be found and Mrs. Rockefeller died soon after reaching San Francisco. The grief-stricken major rejoined his regiment and after years of service found himself leading his men against insurgents near Manila. In one engagement the Filipinos, led by a dashing young white man, made a vicious stand. Maj. Rockefeller shot him dead and the insurgents fled.

From letters found in the young man's pockets it was learned that he was known in Hong Kong as Paul Stanhope. Further inquiry revealed the fact that he was the child, Robert, stolen by the Chinese nurse and placed in a Jesuit college under the name of "Paul Yen." He was afterwards adopted by Henry Stanhope, an English merchant in Hong Kong.

This tragic story comes from Maj. Rockefeller himself, who disappeared from Manila and now turns up at Santa Barbara, Curas, where he writes to his brother-in-law, Terrence Regan, of Milwaukee, that he intends to remain.

CHINESE LABOR.

Bryan's Election Alone Will Check

The Cooley Immigration.

Washington, Oct. 8.—A representative of "The Examiner" met George C. Gorham today at the rooms of the Democratic Congressional Committee.

Being asked what bearing the question of Chinese immigration would have upon the approaching election, he said:

"Chinese immigration has never been heartily opposed by any considerable proportion of the Republican Party east of the Rocky Mountains. The representatives of the Pacific coast from both parties made an up-hill fight for fourteen years after the ratification of the Burlingame Treaty in 1868 before they succeeded in obtaining legislation for the exclusion of Chinese laborers from the United States. They were then obliged to consent to a limitation to the act of ten years. The two parties were at that time very evenly divided in the House, and in the Senate there was a tie. The Eastern Republicans regarded the anti-Chinese declarations of the California Representatives as mere demagogism to catch voters, and it was in that spirit that this temporary enactment was allowed by some Republicans to be passed. Californians know how slackly the law was enforced on the Mexican and Canadian borders. The act expired by the limitation in 1892. A presidential campaign was then opening. Republican managers grudgingly consented to the re-enactment of the exclusion law for ten years more. It was urged upon them that to do otherwise would be to throw the Pacific coast into the hands of the Democrats. After this exclusion act a treaty with China was negotiated, during Mr. Cleveland's administration, by which the Chinese Government consented to the exclusion of her subjects from this country for a period of ten years. This was done to appease the conscience of those people in the east who thought the Chinese had a right to come to our shores, whether we wanted them or not. Although this treaty will not expire until 1904, it would be utterly useless in the absence of any legislation by Congress.

"If the exclusion act of 1892 is not extended by a new law passed before May 6, 1902, Chinese laborers will be as free to come into San Francisco or anywhere else in the United States, without limit as to numbers, as are the subjects of any European nation.

"If McKinley should be reelected he would be in office at that time. The Senate will be Republican, the House probably Democratic, but would be helpless on the subject.

"Unlimited Chinese immigration can only be prevented after the 6th of May, 1902, by an act of Congress, passed by both Houses and approved by the President.

"I do not myself believe that under a Republican administration the exclusion act will be extended. The influences which now prevail with Mr. McKinley are the enemies of organized labor and are to the immigration of the cheapest labor that can be brought either from Europe or Asia to displace the natives and naturalized citizens of the United States, who claim the right to living wages and to lay the organizations for self protection against the organization of the coal, iron and steel and other trusts against them.

"It is my belief that the only safety against the reopening of Chinese immigration without check into the United States lies in the election of Mr. Bryan and a Democratic house of representatives and such a popular demonstration by organized labor as will command the acquiescence of the senate in the enactment of a new Chinese exclusion law."

JULIEN JOTTINGS.

Personal Points—Other Items
From a Business Town,

Julien, Ky., Oct. 16.—Mrs. J. R. Caudle, returned today from a visit to friends in Clarksville.

Mr. J. E. Gossett has returned from the markets. He made very extensive purchases this fall.

The farmers of this section were never busier, and are making preparations to sow a large crop of wheat. Very early seeding is up, but the fly has already appeared and is attacking the tender blades with a vengeance.

The tobacco crop was put in the barn in good condition and it has been well cured. Some loose buyers have been in the neighborhood, but as yet there have been no sales reported.

S. R. White & Co., and Brown & Edwards, the merchants here, report a good fall trade thus far, and both firms have laid in large stocks of goods for their respective stores.

Mr. Warner Returns.

Four years ago ex-Congressman De Witt Warner was found in the anti-Bryan ranks. Not so this year. He says:

"Our country is now at the parting of the ways. If we indulge in subject colonies, make satrapies, and pro-consuls, the great prizes of political success, keep increasing our army to support imperial legions, for any part of earth where we wish to interfere, exploit less advanced nations for our commercial gain and allow the executive to assume whatever prerogatives this extra constitutional program involves, we shall get Roman rottenness long before we have achieved a Roman peace. Our ancestors in the Revolution and our fathers in the Civil War gave their lives and treasure to keep the country from such a fate, and I prefer their ideal of a country to that of Hanna, McKinley and Grover.

THE THEORETIC MAN.

He was rather fond of posing, in his leisure gap and guffaws, and when he had won some respect, he'd won respect; he had one book on physics and one on money economy, and a treatise on the bronchial tubes, and other on astronomy.

He'd theories on everything, from earth to man.

He'd talk with you on paper mines, or lace work or physiognomy; he'd talk with you on history, to him the world of learning held no single mystery.

He met a girl from Louisville, who'd been in college, and she was a store of knowledge.

But she was a little look that bewildered him out completely.

And then she calmly tripped away, smiling very sweetly.

Ah, that man of theory, it was a sad sight to see him.

He wanders round dejectedly, Miss Louisville.

But he has no rule to fit the case, and that is why he's lost.

MY FIRST SURVEY.

BY JOHN TROWBRIDGE.

I well remember my first survey, and a valuable experience connected with it. I was hardly more than a boy at the time, and was spending a vacation on a farm. The country people knew that I was a student in a renowned university, and gave me the credit of possessing a great deal of knowledge. I had not been on the place long before a farmer asked me to survey his wood-lot on the side of a mountain. He said that he did not care for a very accurate survey, for land on a mountain was not very valuable. He wanted to know about how many acres there were in the lot, in order to conclude a bargain.

I remember well his expression as he picked up a bit of straw, put it in his mouth and looked at me. He wanted to know "about" how much; and as he pronounced this word forthrightly, he really looked as if he thought that I was not the man to make the survey.

I was at first not inclined to give up troutling for surveying; but the look of the farmer stirred within me a desire to assert myself, and to prove to him that the job he proposed was as simple to me as digging potatoes was to him. I therefore told him I would send for my instruments, and as soon as they arrived I would survey the lot.

"Send for instruments!" he ejaculated. "I 'spose you could survey it without instruments."

At first I thought he was disposed to make fun of me; but looking in his clear and honest eyes, I could not detect any look of irony. I explained to him how necessary it would be to have certain surveying instruments, which I endeavored to describe in popular language.

He listened attentively to my account of the compass and the plane-table, and after I had finished asked me a question which showed me that I had failed completely to give him the slightest idea of how I proposed to survey his land. We made an appointment to visit the lot, and then I sent for my instruments.

During the night I confess I was troubled by the farmer's look and his remark: "I 'spose you could survey it without instruments!" His idea of me had apparently been a lonely one; and I felt that I personified him to the great university, the seat of all learning, where men are taught to achieve results without the aids which are essential to humbly educated men.

What could be meant by surveying without instruments? A surveyor's chain would be necessary to measure the length of the sides of the field, and drawing instruments would be essential in order to make a map and to compute the area of the lot.

I said to myself: "I will first measure the sides of the wood-lot, and then I will measure the distances from one corner to the other corners of the field. In this way I can divide the field into triangles, and with my drawing instruments I can make a map of it and compute the areas of the triangles; then, by adding together all the triangles, I shall have the area of the lot." Having satisfactorily settled this method of procedure in my mind, I fell asleep.

On the morning appointed he came for me, and we rode together, in an old tumble-down wagon, to the foot of the mountain. I took with me a surveyor's chain and a compass. I noticed that the farmer had a spring balance with him, such as butchers often use to weigh meat and vegetables; and behind the seat of the wagon was a flat board about three feet long by two feet wide.

We left the village road, which was none of the smoothest, at a pair of bars, which were let down by the farmer's man, who had evidently been expecting us. He was a low-set fellow, with a very large pair of boots, which gurgled as he strode along; for he had been cutting brushwood along a brook which ran at the base of the mountain, and had evidently been up to his knees in water.

The farmer and I rode across the fields, the wiry horse plunging into hollows and surmounting hillocks with an energy that was admirable, from a moral point of view, but painful to the occupants of the wagon. I sat on the farmer, and he sat on me, rather of course, I believe, than on him. That the harness held together. Finally we reached a place where the way was impassable for a wagon, and the horse looked around at us as if it expected us now to do our work.

We got out of the wagon, and the farmer's man, coming up at that instant, took a bag from under the seat. The farmer took the board and the spring balances, and we entered the wood by a narrow path which led up the mountain. This path was almost obliterated in places by masses of ferns, which here and there caught the sunlight with a splendor such as is seen to the greatest advantage in openings in the forest, where the brilliant light is contrasted with the gloom of the deep woods.

My companions did not reply to my ejaculations of delight at the beauty of the path, and strode on with serious countenances, as if ferns and underbrush were much in the way.

The path presently skirted an open pasture, and I immediately discerned the purpose of the bag which the farmer's man carried. It contained salt, which he strewed upon some ledges in the pasture. He then uttered a peculiar call, and a herd of cattle rushed down the slopes.

The man hastily regained the path just in time, for a fierce bull, with bloodshot eyes, was close upon him. The farmer looked over his herd with apparent satisfaction, and remarked that salting cattle was apt to be a dangerous business—he had a man once who was almost killed by the rushing herd.

We left the cattle in possession of the field, followed the path again into the woods, and finally reached the wood-lot. I immediately set about measuring the sides of the field, with the aid of the farmer's man. He went ahead with one end of the chain, while I held the other. Thus we proceeded around the lot; and then we measured the distance from one corner to an opposite corner. Nothing then remained but to compute the area of the field. I promised the farmer, who had watched me from a seat on a stump, that I would make the computation that evening with the aid of my table of logarithms.

The farmer arose, as if it were time to assert himself; he told me that it was essential that he should know immediately about how many acres there were in the lot, and he proposed to make an estimate upon the spot.

I felt that the word logarithms had convinced him that I was a theoretical man, and that I lacked the power of getting quickly at results.

I earnestly set my wits to work to think of some rough method of getting the number of acres in the lot. I set up my instruments and measured off perpendiculars, and got into a state of hopeless confusion, for I had not accustomed myself to take what is called a common-sense view of such an undertaking. I was in somewhat the position of the sculptor who should seek to polish a statue before he had completely roughed it.

The farmer arose, as if it were time to assert himself; he told me that it was essential that he should know immediately about how many acres there were in the lot, and he proposed to make an estimate upon the spot.

I felt that the word logarithms had convinced him that I was a theoretical man, and that I lacked the power of getting quickly at results.

I earnestly set my wits to work to think of some rough method of getting the number of acres in the lot.

I set up my instruments and measured off perpendiculars, and got into a state of hopeless confusion, for I had not accustomed myself to take what is called a common-sense view of such an undertaking. I was in somewhat the position of the sculptor who should seek to polish a statue before he had completely roughed it.

The farmer began with great solemnity to pace along the boundaries of the field, pausing at each corner and writing down with a stump of a pencil the number of paces in the sides of the field.

Having paced completely around the lot, which was a four-sided one, he paced across it from one corner to an opposite corner, thus dividing the field into two triangles.

He told me that the average length of his paces was two feet and six inches. And he obtained in this way a very good approximation to the results I had obtained with the chain.

I failed, however, to see how he could calculate the number of acres; for it was not likely that he knew the trigonometrical formulas necessary for the purpose.

I was soon enlightened; for bidding his man bring the balance and the board, he divided with his foot rule the sides of the board into inches. One side of the board contained 36 inches, and the shorter side 24 inches.

"If," said he, "one of these inches represents 100 feet, this board would represent a field 3,600 feet long and 2,400 feet wide, and if I should multiply by the length of the body by 36,000, I would get the contents of such a field in square feet."

He looked at me with an inquiring look. I bowed assent, and at his request multiplied 3,600 by 2,400, and obtained the number of 8,640,000 square feet.

He then asked me to divide this number by the number of square feet there are in an acre, in order to obtain the number of acres that the board represented. Fortunately, I remembered that these are 43,560 square feet in an acre; so I performed the result for him and obtained 198 as the result, or very nearly 200 acres. The farmer then attached the board on his spring balance and found that it weighed eight pounds.

He then laid off in inches, on the same scale of 100 feet to one inch, the longest side of the field along the longest side of the board, and taking a string—the length of which was equal, on the same scale, to one side of the field, added to the length of the diagonal of the lot—he held its ends on the longer side of the board. One of the ends was at a corner, and the other at the end of the distance which represented the long side of the field.

He marked with his pencil the point on the board, which he reached by stretching the loop of the string so that the portion of the string on one side of the field, and the portion on the other side of the field, represented the length of the distance between the opposite corners.

In the same way he marked out on the board the remaining corner of the field, and he drew straight lines on the board between these corners. "There," said he, "I have a map of my field. It isn't a square or anything regular. It is kind of a wopper-jawed figure, and I 'spose you think my way of getting at the number of acres is sort of wopper-jawed. But I never had your education, and it is the best I can do."

Then he directed his man so to saw off portions of the board as to leave only the figure of the field. When this had been done he weighed what remained, and the result was four pounds.

"The whole board," said he, "weighed eight pounds and represented 200 acres. Therefore my field contains 100 acres, for the board now weighs just one-half of what it did before. You will be able, with your instruments, to get a better result; but I guess I'm pretty near right."

We gathered up the farmer's surveying instruments—the spring balance, the saw and the board—and descended the mountain.

With my table of logarithms I worked out a result that evening which was more accurate than the one obtained by him; but the difference between my result and his was not very great, and I failed to impress the farmer as a man who could do something without the aid of a book, a man for immediate action.

One might wonder why the farmer did not get the contents of the field by measuring the perpendicular or shorter distance from any angle of one of the triangles into which the field was divided to the side opposite this angle. The contents of this opposite side multiplied by one-half the length of this perpendicular, and the contents of the whole field would be the sum of that of the triangles. Unfortunately, however, the farmer had not the advantage of a very simple knowledge of geometry; and the young surveyor was too desirous of using a formula which gave the contents of the field when the three sides of each of the triangles were known. What are afterward seen to be the simplest methods are often overlooked at first.—Youth's Companion.

SCOURGE OF THE LOCUST.

Of course the locusts, which in miles which the world's land surface are more or less continually subject to the scourge of the hungry locust. It causes, we are told, more pecuniary loss and misery than a native war or a series of native wars combined; or, for that matter, a greater loss than a war between England and the South African republics. Thus the question of fighting the locust is one of the gravest importance.

VICTORY IN TOWNE'S STEP.

Secretary Wash Says the Mistake of 1898 Will Not Be Repeated.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 8.—Secretary Charles A. Walsh of the Democratic National committee said of Mr. Towne's withdrawal:

"Mr. Towne has taken a wise, patriotic and noble course and his action will undoubtedly aid materially in the cause for which we are all working. He pays a high compliment to the Democratic party and its sincerity of purpose by pointing out the result at the Kansas City convention as proof that the Democratic party in convention at Chicago in 1896 was animated by a fixed and irrevocable purpose moment.

I believe that the national committee of the people's party will be animated by the same motives and the same devotion to principle which has been characteristic of the Democratic party as now constituted and will follow the example of Mr. Towne by giving their support to Bryan and Stevenson and by placing the name of the latter on their ticket.

"If we are, as I believe, battling to a very large extent for the same principles it would be the height of folly to repeat our experiences of 1896, when jealousies and dissensions were aroused in various close states by the endeavor to reconcile the conflicting interests of Sewall and Watson."

Some Facts About Trusts.

In interviews and with prominent retail merchants on the subject of the Trusts and the war tax much inside information has been gained as to methods of Trusts' restraint upon competitive commerce, and the effect of its war tax upon consumers.

With reference to Trusts, the Standard Oil Trust is the largest, most powerful and most scrupulous. Its methods of restraining competition in trade are various and far reaching. It has practical control of shipping rates through secret agreements as to rebates with the railroads, whereby a rebate is given on every shipment, which makes it impossible for the small producer and refiner to market his goods. It resorts to every means to drive small refiners out of business. It has been known to seek injunction against the use of certain transportation facilities, and failing in the attempt, it has solicited signatures to a petition declaring the refinery a public nuisance. It has raised the prices of oil 2½ per gallon ($1.50 per bbl.) within the last year. Its defense is, like that put forward for the sugar trust, that oil is so cheap that no one need be deprived of its use. The argument of the people is that if, with oil selling at the present price and even lower, Mr. Rockefellar has been able to amass a fortune of five hundred millions, the trust might have sold oil at a much lower price and still have earned vast sums of money. In other words no matter how low the price is, it might be greatly less with respect past all reasonable expectations to the trust.

The Sugar Trust.

Second in strength is the Sugar Trust. In answer to the question of whether sugar was selling today at a higher price than it did ten years ago, a large retail merchant said that it was sold now for less, although the price has been raised recently, and is now 2½ per lb. higher than it was two years ago. The retailer proceeded:

"The Sugar Trust has many methods of coercion. For instance, a merchant whose business will average say $200,000 per year cannot buy direct from the trust, but must purchase from the jobbers in his section. The Trust first commenced selling to the merchants of the above class nothing less than ten barrel lots. This was raised to 25 barrels then to 50 and now to 100. Then came the notice that purchases would have to be made from the jobber. If a merchant asks for a quotation from a jobber in another city on 100 barrel lot, he is informed he must pay whatever price is asked by his own jobber, and must pay the freight on the shipment. Thus he is forced to deal with one of certain jobbers and buy at a price fixed by the Trust. If it is found that two merchants are dividing a lot, both are notified that their orders will not be filled in the future. Much hardship is thus forced on retailers who must have sugar, but many of whom have not facilities for storing it in such quantities.

"The Trust absolutely and arbitrarily controls the price of its products, and the jobber is compelled to sell for that price or be refused dealing with the Trust.

When asked, how about beet-sugar," the retailer said, "I do not handle it at all, but the beet-sugar industry is commonly supposed to be controlled entirely by the Sugar Trust. It has been pretty well shown by testimony before Congressional Committees and Commissions that the supposition is well-based. Incidentally the merchant stated that Arbuckle was supposed either to be in the Trust at present or soon would be.

The Cracker Trust.

The cracker Trust is very strong and is known by the name of the National Biscuit Company. Its method of freezing out competition is very similar to those of the other trusts. The employees in his factory numbered, perhaps, 100, and for some time successfully withheld the efforts of the trust to run his business. Finally, however, he was forced, by repeated cuts in the price of crackers and small cakes, to sell out to the trust. By this nearly 100 men were thrown out of employment. The product of the cracker factories has risen in price from time to time, and although the quality of the goods put out by it has proven in many cases to be very much inferior to those made by private factories they sell in the market at higher prices.

The Baking Powder Trust.

The Baking Powder Trust is, after the Sugar Trust, perhaps the most remorseful in its methods. Denials are constant that there is a Baking Powder Trust, but the facts show differently. It is supposed that Price of Chicago, and the Royal Company control the Baking Powder industry. The Royal Company employs, instead of ordinary salesmen, men who might be called traveling inspectors. They visit the stores of merchants and either by questioning or by general observation see what brands are handled by him. If it is found that other brands than that of the Royal Company are sold every effort is made to prevent them from handling them in the future. There are other and better brands than the Royal, but a demand that is general and widespread is created by the enormous expenditure for advertising purposes. The other brands sell for from 10 to 15 cents per pound, cheaper than the Royal. Some of these brands are much better than the Royal, but the call for them is very much less. The Royal Company when they find a retailer selling the Royal brand for less than 45 cents per pound refuses to sell him another pound.

Merchants are furnished a written agreement which they are compelled to sign, stating that they will not sell Royal Baking Powder for less than 45 cents per pound. The Powder costs the Trust from 15 to 18 cents per pound to make.

Flour Trust.

"The Flour Trust, backed and controlled as it is by the Grain and Elevator Trust, has raised the price of flour 25¢ per barrel in the last week. Still further advances in flour may be expected within the next few days."

Other Trusts.

There is the Tack Trust, which absolutely controls the price of all tacks and nails. A place in New England there is a mill for the manufacture of tacks, and since the Trust acquired control of it, the mill has been shut down and not a ton of its product has been sold. The shut-down threw 150 men out of work.

"There is a Bucket Trust, Broom Trust, Starch Trust and Feather-Duster Trust. Every washwoman has to pay more for her starch, and her wash-bags cost her more because of the wooden-ware Trust.

The stage and its varieties interesting topics, especially to the woman's magazine, The American Queen, several pages are devoted to the actresses of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Some of the great celebrities are illustrated in different poses and in various roles, while others are merely shown in the particular roles which have made them famous. The articles themselves are excellently written.

Other subjects of interest in this magazine are: "A Turkish Wedding," effectively and profusely illustrated; a complete story entitled "The Man in the Cloak;" an article on "How to Sit for One's Photograph," and short household and toilet articles galore, besides a large number of suggestions for Christmas gifts in embroidery and lace.

that the mosquito was in some manner closely related to the malaria. As far back, in fact, as the beginning of the Christian Era, writers touched upon the relation of the mosquito to malaria, and among the early American writers along these lines may be mentioned Mitchell, of Philadelphia; Nott, of New Orleans (in 1748); and King, of Washington, (who published a pamphlet in 1853), giving numerous plausible reasons for sustaining the theory.

The mosquito theory has been continuously studied, not only by Laveran, in 1891 (he who discovered the malarial plasmodium); Pfeiffer, who evolved the specific germ of la grippe, as well as Bigani, but the great Koch, whose name will ever be associated with the practical demonstration of the cause of tuberculosis, has for several years devoted much time and study to this branch of germ life.

A recent writer observes: "The fact that the malarial parasite is paludinal in its habits, and that the mosquito is a blood sucker and also paludinal in habit, is extremely suggestive of this connection. The idea, however, did not take definite form until Patrick Manson, in his Goulstonian lectures delivered in 1836, set forth a definite hypothesis, based on certain well-established facts, namely, that the malarial parasite possessed a flagellating phase, that this phase is developed from the mature parasite, that it is evolved only when the parasite is outside the human body, that the flagella, when formed break away from the parent parasite, and that, when free, the flagella were capable of living as independent organisms. He thus led to believe that the flagella was the extracorporeal phase in the life history of parasites. As it was impossible or the form in which this organism originated to escape from the human body by itself, it was necessary to invoke the assistance of some outside agency. The most probable agent was the mosquito, and Manson supposed that the flagellated body was sucked, in its latent form, into the stomach of the mosquito and developed therein. The flagellae then broke away from the central sphere, and in virtue of their locomotive power traversed the blood in the mosquito's stomach, penetrated the stomach wall, entered some cell and started the 'outside-of-the-body' life of the malarial parasite. Manson still believed, however, that the mosquito could be air or water borne, for he supposed that on the death of the mosquito the parasite was liberated, and either inhaled from the air or carried into the system in drinking water."

All these theories regarding malaria are most interesting, but the facts of most vital import are those related to the cure of the disease. The aësto-autumnal paroxysms are energetically at work everywhere now.

Reports from South American countries are confirming definitely the fact, already observed and announced by many eminent medical men throughout America, that the synthetic product organic chemistry, phenalgin, is of great value in fighting these parasites. From five to fifteen grains of phenalgin may be given every two to four hours. Inside of forty-eight hours the average attack of malaria will be aborted. Not only will this of course of treatment be antagonistic to the poisons of malaria but will soothe and relieve the distressing symptoms accompanying it, reducing the fever, allaying the aches and pains and causing a restful sleep.

Nowhere does malaria assume a more virulent form than in the tropical countries, and when we have such pronounced results in favor of phenalgin as an effective malarial germicide it is convincing. Following the above course for adults ten grains of quinine (in capsules) accompanied by the same amount of phenalgin may be given at bedtime for two or three nights, after which a tonic composed of the following may be given three times a day for a week or ten days, viz:

Quinine Sulphate 5 drams
Fowler's Solution 1 dram
Water 6 ounces
Glycerine 2 ounces

Shake. Dose: A tablespoonful at meal time.

Judge George Gray, of Delaware, recently appointed arbitration commissioner for the United States, has come out for Bryan. He followed Cleveland in 1896.

The new election bill, such as it is, finally received the vote of every member of the House. The Republicans refused to accept it though until it was too late for it to apply to the coming election.

Alabama's population is 1,828,697, an increase since 1890 of nearly 21 per cent. There are 32 cities with a population exceeding 2,000, nine of them exceeding 5,000. Anniston alone shows a decrease since 1890.

Yerkes and Bradley spoke at Danville Saturday along defensive lines. Yerkes, in reply to James Andrew Scott's charge that he was present at a secret conference in the Galt House at which Goebel's death was ordained, entered a denial, claiming that the conference in which he participated was an open meeting, in which the subsequent crime was not mentioned. Bradley for the first time characterized as a lie the testimony of several Republican witnesses in the assassination trials that he had knowledge of the plan for removing Gov. Goebel and advised against it.

The Kentucky Legislature adjourned yesterday after a session of 56 days in which time three election bills were passed. One of these changed the square enclosing the device to a circle one inch in diameter just beneath it. The second made several amendments to the present law, including provisions for preserving all the ballots, for permitting challenged voters to vote by affidavits to be subsequently investigated, and reported upon by the grand jury and requiring the secretary of State to furnish all ballot-paper. The third bill was passed Saturday as a conference measure and was the Democratic caucus measure put through the House several weeks ago, by a party vote amended in but one respect. The third man on the county boards is to be the county Sheriff. All appointments, however, are to be made from lists of eight in each precinct submitted by the county committees of the two leading parties. It was ordered that 50,000 copies of the new laws be printed for circulation. The bill changes the political complexion of the boards of Christian and 30 or 40 other counties, but it does not take effect until the latter part of January, 1901. It is a great satisfaction to the Democrats of Christian county that their Senator, Hon. R. C. Crenshaw, was one of only four who stood out to the end against the bill.

Our old friend Judge M. D. Brown seems to have gotten entirely away from his ancient Democratic moorings. He is billed to make a Republican speech at the court house the Saturday night before the election. The Judge was the youngest of a family of ten brothers, all Democrats of forty years' standing, and we hate to see him mixed up in one of those Saturday night round-ups the Christian county Republicans always have just before the election. As a rule they are gatherings that do not reflect credit upon the few white men who attend them.

Henry Youtsey, the third of the assassins placed on trial has been found guilty of complicity in the murder of Gov. Goebel and given a life sentence. His own confession was used as evidence against him and this probably caused the jury to temper justice with mercy and spare his life. Youtsey broke down and became hysterical during the recital of his confession and the trial was finished with the prisoner lying on a cot in a state of physical collapse. He is slowly improving.

The 25th anniversary of Vanderbilt University will be celebrated at Nashville to-day and W. K. Vanderbilt, grandson of the founder, will present the new Kissam Hall, just completed at a cost of $130,000. The Vanderbilt family's donations now aggregate $1,500,000. The University has turned out 3,000 graduates in 25 years and the attendance is now about 750 pupils.

Bradley mustered up enough courage at Lexington the other day to deny Bennett Young's charges of a few days ago, characterizing them as "falsehoods" and Col. Young as "no gentleman." Col. Young's next "inning" is awaited with interest.

N. B. Chambers, a Yerkes windjammer, while haranguing an audience at Morganfield Saturday, is reported to have praised the mountaineers for fighting in the civil war until "treason died." Confederate "traitors" who have been leaning towards Yerkes will doubtless be pleased to learn how they are regarded by the District Chairman of the party trying to elect Yerkes.

The New York Herald claims 281 votes for McKinley, but concedes Kentucky to Bryan. It professes to believe that the Republicans will elect five congressmen in Kentucky.

Charles Dudley Warner, the noted editor, lecturer and auditor, dropped dead at Hartford, Conn., Saturday, aged 71 years.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Fratrus Warfield Who Attempted to Assult Mrs. Penick Taken

From Jail by a Mob at Midnight.

Elkton Ky. Oct. 18.—Last night at midnight the negro Fratus Warfield, who attempted to outrage Mrs. Len Penick, the wife of a prominent farmer near this city Tuesday, was taken from the jail by a mob and hanged.

Everything was so quiet that very few expected him to be lynched, but it does not take effect until the latter part of January, 1901. It is a great satisfaction to the Democrats of Christian county that their Senator, Hon. R. C. Crenshaw, was one of only four who stood out to the end against the bill.

After securing the prisoner the mob went out Clarksville street about a mile and swung him up to a limb.

Very few of the citizens knew what had happened until this morning.

A big crowd of sightseers was on the ground when Coroner Bruce arrived. A jury was at once impaneled, and the usual verdict was returned, that the deceased came to his death at the hands of an unknown party or parties by hanging.

Simultaneously Dramatized.

Almost simultaneously, "Ben Hur" General Lew Wallace's famous novel, and "Quo Vadis," Henry Sienkiewicz's life of the early Christians, were dramatized. These two great religious plays are receiving the consideration of nearly every person, including the clergy of all denominations. "Quo Vadis" burns upon the brain the struggles and triumphs of the early church. The feasting at the imperial palace, the contest in the arena, the burning of Rome, the rescue of Lydia (the Christian maiden,) will hold their place in memory with unfading color and are to be reckoned among the significant genius of native art. The above fine offering will be seen at Holland's Opera House on Nov. 12, in its entirety.

FREE TURNPIKES

Assured and Every Indication of an Awakening.

At last the people of this great county are awakening on this important subject, that means so much to every citizen wherever located, for no thing imaginable could contribute so much to the upbuilding and developing of the county and bring prosperity to the farmer as this great improvement. It enables the farmer to market his produce to the best advantage at any time and in any direction. It gives opportunity for trading, exchanging ideas and promoting friendship not now enjoyed and opens avenues for endeavors in a thousand and ways.

Indeed there are so many advantages and disadvantages attached to it that it seems strange that so enlightened a people as ours, should have gone on thus far spending enough money in ten years to pay for good pikes every where with nothing but the ever present mud hole to show for it. The proposition as outlined in the address of the Goodroads club in Fridays KENTUCKIAN is so simple and fair that it is taking with the people like the proverbial wildfire and it is safe to say they will not forget to secure for themselves the blessings that good free roads will surely bring.

HEADQUARTERS.

Many Speeches Booked For This Week.

Democrats in Good Shape Everywhere And Ready For The Voting.

The closing days of the campaign find the Democratic organization in all sections of the county. Many precincts have sent in word that no more speeches are needed, that the boys are all in line and ready for the voting.

In more than one half of the districts there are no McKinley Democrats who are known as such to their neighbors. It is not believed that 100 people in the county who were ever Democrats will vote with the Republicans in favor of imperialism, carpet-baggers, trusts and government by assassination.

These defections will be made up by accessions from these Republicans. In nearly every precinct there are some of these honest Republicans who draw the line at assassination and will not vote for the man who wrote the platform endorsing the crimes of Taylor. Under the new law a voter cannot vote unless he gives a written affidavit that he is a qualified voter in the precinct in which he votes and these affidavits are required to be turned over to the next grand jury, who must report upon them and indict all who swore falsely, and the penalty is 2 to 5 years in the penitentiary. This will make fraudulent voting and registration a risky business in the future. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week are the supplementary registration days in the city and those who swear falsely to register will go up against this affidavit oath when they try to vote.

There are 150 negroes not registered and the Democratic committee has had the list investigated and many of them cannot lawfully get their names on the books. It is believed that most of them will obey the instructions from Republican leaders and try to register unlawfully. Those who succeed in violating the law, will be challenged when they try to vote. The Democrats are determined to break up Republican frauds in Christian county if the State is forced to build another branch penitentiary.

Committeeman Webb C. Bell, assisted by Mr. John W. Richards, is now in charge of Headquarters, while the regular officers are away. To-morrow Committeeman J. H. Craggton will relieve Mr. Bell, who will join the campaigners at Crotton.

Judge Thos. P. Cook will address the Democrats of Edward's Mill precinct at the voting place to-morrow night. The club in that precinct now embraces nearly all of the Democratic voters.

Jas. B. Allensworth and Judge Thos. P. Cook spoke to the Haddock's School House club Friday night and were greeted by an overflowing house. Four more Republicans joined the club at the conclusion of the speaking.

Howell in Daviess.

W. R. Howell, of Hopkinsville, will close his speaking campaign in Daviess county with a speech at Griffith at 7 o'clock tonight. He speaks at Sorgho at 1:30 p. m. today. He spoke at Delaware at 1:30 p. m. Thursday. The speaking was in a large tobacco factory and it was filled with people. Such a large crowd of voters at Delaware to hear a poitical speech is strong proof of the great interest the voters are taking in the present campaign, for candidates and campaign speakers say that it is more difficult to get out a crowd at Delaware to hear a political speech than at any other point in the county. Four Republicans in the audience at Delaware announced their intention to vote the Democratic ticket both state and national. Mr. Howell spoke at West Louisville Thursday night to a big crowd, and as at all his other appointments the enthusiasm was great. Mr. Howell has had big crowds at all his appointments in the county. In fact the like was never before seen in Daviess county in the country neighborhoods. Mr. Howell says he feels much flattered over the reception the voters have given him, and is confident that Daviess is going to give an old-time Democratic majority. He is being accompanied to all his speaking appointments by Mr. H. G. Overstreet, who is putting in some very fine work for the Democratic ticket. Mr. Howell returns home Sunday and will be one of the speakers engaged in a whirlwind campaign of Christian county next week. He will make several speeches in McLean county later in the campaign.—Messenger.

The Band As Made Up.

E. D. Jones, of Newstead, will be the driver of the band-wagon, one of Forbes & Bro's. best Mogul, the wagon and team being contributed by Mr. Jones for the purpose. It will be drawn by two of his fine harness horses and the owner will handle the reins himself.

The band will consist of ten pieces. The Lafayette Band is the basis of the organization, with some Hopkinsville talent used to fill vacancies.

The band is made up as follows:

E. J. Roper, Lafayette, cornet. Frank Watters, Dover, Tenn., .. W. L. Mitchell, Hopkinsville, E. M. Roper, Lafayette, trabone, Jasper Fauqua, " alto. Will Stamper, " tenor. Harry Thacker, " base drum. Harry Brane, " snare drum. F. W. Gilbert, Hopkinsville, baritone.

Lou Lycan, Lafayette.

Lyman Lycan, " In addition to the band wagon, there are one or two other wagons, for carrying necessary supplies of various kinds to cover accidents.

There will be numerous buggie's and horsemen in the parade. The overland train will move on schedule time and good order will be enforced. It is not a frolic or a pleasure junket but a practical business way of attracting the people to talk to them about the issues of the campaign and supply them with literature. It is the same kind of a campaign in a small way that Bryan, Roosevelt and Hanna have been conducting all summer in railroad towns.

A GREAT SPEECH.

Congressman Carmack Delights A Big Audience.

His Address The Best Discussion of National Issues Heard Here.

The Court House was packed to overflowing Saturday to hear a speech that turned out to be the best political address heard here for years.

Hon. E. W. Carmack, the young Congressman from the Memphis district, came a stranger, but left with a thousand ardent admirers among the best Democrats in Kentucky.

His speech was secured through the personal efforts of Mr. Webb C. Bell, Chairman of the Speakers Committee of the Democratic county organization, who was a schoolmate of the distinguished orator.

The speech was two hours and ten minutes long and many people stood up to hear it all. It aroused the enthusiasm of the audience to the highest pitch and brought into line a number of wavering Democrats.

He began by appealing to the Kentucky Democrats to put aside their family quarrels and fight together against Republicanism for party victory in the State and nation. It was ghoulish, he said, to drag Goebel's body through this campaign. Then he launched into a terrific arraignment of the administration for its policy of imperialism and the Republican party for its alignment with trusts.

It was a vote-winning speech, and its points were time and again cheered to the echo. At its conclusion hundreds of people gathered around Mr. Carmack and he was given a great ovation.

Mr. Carmack is a young man of commanding presence and wonderful oratorical talents and graces.

As an orator he is destined to occupy the front rank and when he becomes a Senator—he is already virtually nominated—his State will have further reason to be proud of her gifted son.

True Economy

The difference of cost between a good and a poor baking powder would not amount for a family's supply to one dollar a year. The poor powder would cost many times this in doctors' bills.

Royal Baking Powder may cost a little more per can, but it insures perfect, wholesome food. In fact, it is more economical in the end, because it goes further in leavening and never spoils the food.

Royal Baking Powder used always in making the biscuit and cake saves both health and money.

On Sunday the Virginia street Baptist church, the Methodist church and the Court House were all occupied by visiting ministers and the crowds everywhere were very large. The resources of the colored people were severely taxed to take care of the great numbers present, but all were well entertained with the assistance of the colored people of other denominations.

TROLLEY SYSTEMS.

Responsible in Great Measure for Small Gains in Population of Large Cities.

The Chicago Tribune has gathered facts to explain why the population of a number of our large cities, as returned by the last census, failed to reach the expectation of some of their enterprising citizens. It is a matter of current remark that the gain in population of a number of these cities fell a good deal short of the estimates based upon rates of growth which have held true for several decades past, until the one just closed. For instance, one of the large cities of Ohio gained but a very little over nine percent during the past ten years, whereas for the preceding ten-year period the gain was 16 per cent. The explanation is found in the fact that the rapid extension of trolley lines, or so-called "rapid transit" facilities, has enabled people to remove their habitation from the business center or crowded residence districts beyond the city limits, into the suburbs. On this account the census returns of these cities now fail to show large numbers of people whose regular place of business is established within the city. This explanation seems reasonable, for it has been apparent to observing people all along that the great extension of transportation facilities in city and suburban districts, during comparatively recent years, has exerted a salutary effect upon the distribution of the people in populous centers. It should be remembered, however, says the Rail-way and Engineering Review, that the electric railways have not been entirely alone in this development, for although they have greatly outrivaled the steam roads in their suburban accommodations in the larger number of cities, it must be taken into consideration that the effect of the competition has been to lower the suburban rates on steam lines and to cause the latter to greatly increase their suburban service in many of the larger cities. In the smaller cities, where suburban service on steam roads could hardly be made to pay, the trolley roads hold the field, but in the larger cities the steam roads have the advantage, when it comes to distance. Business men are not inclined to spend an hour in a trolley car riding seven or eight miles if they can take a steam train which will get them over that distance in less than half that time, and afford more comfortable seats besides. In any general consideration of the question, however, the trolley lines must be conceded to be formidable competitors of the steam roads for city and suburban passenger traffic. They have been the cause of a great change in the conditions of such traffic, but it should be reflected that the steam roads, by adjusting their service and traffic arrangements to the changed conditions, have helped at least a little toward the general progress.

GAVE HIM THE MOUSE.

How a Little Boy Dared as Ebony Landed His Game.

He was dark as ebony, and the ragged straw hat that gravity barely kept on his woolly head and the broken shoes of men's size on his stockless feet, were extremes of habiliments in the same degree of dilapidation. He was probably eight years old, and when he shuffled into a flower store, it was evident he was not in search of orchids or American beauties or Brad carnations.

Approaching Miss Brooke, the youngster said, bashfully:

"Miss, kin gib me er mouse?"

Miss Brooke was both astonished and amused, says the Washington Star.

"Why," she exclaimed, "this is not a mouse store, little boy."

"But day's er mouse in yo' wind," returned the lad.

Leading the way out the boy pointed to the corner of the display window on Fourteenth street, and, sure enough, there, nestled under the ferns, was a round, sleek little mouse. It was caught without difficulty and given to the boy, who received it with a hearty "thankie."

When asked what he was going to do with it, he replied:

"Dat little dob'g ob mine git er chanst ter play wid 'im."

Licking Stamps Not Dangerous.

Experts connected with the London Lancet have been looking into the sanitary features of postage stamps. They find that the coloring on the new half-penny stamp consists of a mixture of Prussian blue and a chrome color, without any lead, arsenic or other irritant. The gum is obtained from starch. It is decided that the stamp contains no injurious substances, and, therefore, licking would be harmless.

THE VANDERBILT FOREST.

Boundary Fence is 300 Miles Long and gives Rangers Guard the Preserve.

The Pisgah forest has cost Vanderbilt something like $250,000, or about $2.50 an acre. He has bought it in great or small tracts as rapidly as possible, and now his rangers are the only denizens. There are five of them, all picked men of the mountains, of fine physique, good riders and dead shots. They must keep open the roads and trails, see that the boundary fence, 300 miles in length, is all right; keep out poachers, look after the game and the trout and always be on the alert for timber stealers. There are 265 miles of trail in this forest, the trails leading alongside each trout stream. There are 10 miles of road passable for wagons. There are miles of shooting paths, the latter 15 feet in width, and cut out right and left from the roads. When deer are driven they must cross these paths, and by means of the latter alone can the hunter see them in time to get a shot.

Though Mr. Vanderbilt is not a sportsman, but a student, yet all things are kept ready for him. His pleasure is the pleasure of others. On his last visit he only caught one trout, nor did he fire a gun. His wife was with him. She is a good horsewoman, and rode a pony up and down the steepest trails. Under protection native trout are rapidly restocked the streams without artificial propagation.

At Baltimore Mr. Vanderbilt has an arboretum, one of the largest in the world, and the pioneer in the United States. This was formerly the direction of Gifford Pinchot, who is at present head forester of the United States; it is now under the direction of Dr. Schenck as forester. In this arboretum more than 300,000 trees and shrubs have been planted. Pisgah forest is the complement of the arboretum, and in these wild woods Dr. Schenck has a lodge where he spends much of each summer with his class. In the latter are often youths of wealth and high social position who wish to study forestry—a study which the United States sorely needs, since so many millions are daily devoting themselves to the task of forest destruction and so few to conservation.—Forest and Stream.

Mr. Vanderbilt has a house which is a veritable hell, with debilitating drabs, inflammation, ulceration, female trouble and bearing down in pains, will find complete relief and cure in Doctor Pierce's "Pain-Relieving" Formula. It is peculiarly feminine and regulates their functions that they are established.

"I was troubled with female weakness, and after taking Dr. Pierce's Pain-Relieving Prescription I am free from pains," writes Mrs. C. A. D. of Toledo, Ohio.

"I had suffered for two years before I began taking your medicine. I could not walk without pain, and the pain was constant. Now I do all my housework and walk where I please—thanks to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

The divorce evil seems to grow with every year. 7,500 divorces were granted in the State of Ohio last year. We agree that there are faults on both sides, but the great majority of cases are not irreconcilable.

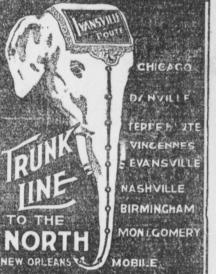

To a great extent there is no doubt the conditions which result in divorce may be removed. Girls of good character and a wife suffering from female trouble can very little doubt that only because they look forward to divorce only because they feel fitted to fulfill. Women are not to blame. They have looked forward to their happiness.

"I am a woman who suffers with debilitating drabs, inflammation, ulceration, female trouble and bearing down in pains, will find complete relief and cure in Doctor Pierce's Pain-Relieving" Formula.

"I was suffering with female trouble, and after taking Dr. Pierce's Pain-Relieving Prescription I am free from pains," writes Mrs. C. A. D. of Toledo, Ohio.
